This hazardous weather outlook is for portions of central Kansas,
east central Kansas, south central Kansas and southeast Kansas.

.DAY ONE...Today and Tonight

A few strong storms could produce gusty winds this morning.
Additional storms are expected to redevelop later this afternoon, and persist through the late evening hours as they move northeast across the region. This second round of storms will have better potential to produce severe weather. Damaging winds will be the primary risk although large hail and a few tornadoes may also be possible.

.DAYS TWO THROUGH SEVEN...Tuesday through Sunday

No hazardous weather is expected at this time.

.SPOTTER INFORMATION STATEMENT...

Spotter activation is not anticipated today or tonight.
